The first week of the month was marked by higher volatility, with the index testing levels close to 49000. However, bulls made a strong comeback, supported by heavyweights leading to a sharp rally of over 5000 points. Relative Rotation Graphs (RRG):

6-May-25

Relative rotation graphs chart shows the relative strength and momentum for group of Stocks/ Indices. It allows us to compare a security against the benchmark to see if it is outperforming or underperforming the benchmark. It is derived on Relative strength in which value of a sector is divided by the value of index mainly a benchmark which allows us to compare the performance of the sector. Relative Strength ratio is normalized to oscillate around 100 (plotted on X axis) i.e Jdk RS- Ratio along with this it provides the speed and direction of the Relative strength ratio (plotted on Y axis) i.e Jdk RS- momentum. The scatter plot is divided into four quadrants i.e Leading , Weakening quadrant, Lagging and Improving quadrant.

The analysis of sectorial RRG shows that Nifty Bank is in the Leading Quadrant which indicates strength going ahead. Nifty IT, Pharma, Realty, and Auto are inside the Lagging quadrant which shows strength and momentum both are missing. Nifty Energy, Metal, FMCG, PSU Banks and Infra are under Improving quadrant which suggests strength is still low but momentum will start Improving.

Seasonality Chart - Nifty 500

Seasonality in markets refers to the tendency of stocks or indices to exhibit recurring performance patterns during specific months or periods of the year. It's based on historical data and helps traders anticipate likely trends.

April consistently shows strong positive returns in most years (e.g. 2024: +3.66%, 2023: +4.55%), making it one of the most bullish months historically. May generally also shows a mild positive bias, although less consistent than April. Implication: April is a seasonally strong month, often suitable for initiating long positions. May is moderately bullish but more variable, suggesting caution or selectivity in stock picking.
